

Sepura Business Continuity: COVID-19 Pandemic

Cambridge, 20th March 2020

Sepura is carefully monitoring the impact of the coronavirus pandemic and taking all necessary precautions to protect and support its employees and customers as they in turn protect and support the public.

We are closely following UK government advice. Critical functions are being maintained in the office, supported by home-based teams as necessary to minimise the risk of infection whilst ensuring customer requirements can be met.

Sepura's main operations are undertaken in the UK with warehousing, configuration and support based at our secure site in Cambridge. Our key radio products are manufactured in Europe, and we have our own experienced staff embedded in local supply chains to facilitate and prioritise production. Despite the travel restrictions in place we are currently able to source additional radios to replenish our inventory and meet customer demand.

Sepura also has a number of official partners around the world who stock our products and who are able to support local customers. We continue supporting these partners with service and technical knowledge as we have always done.

We remain committed to supporting our critical communications customers in these challenging times.
